

Get Your Fall on in Oberlin

Cal Ransom
This Week Editor

If You Can't Visit Orchards, Pick Native Fruit

In theory, you can pick tiny apples off the apple trees behind Severance Hall, but is it really worth it? No. Instead, try paw paw fruit. Paw paw trees are native to Ohio and produce green fruits with a light, tropical flavor reminiscent of a mango. They're great on their own, but they can also be used to make banana bread-like bread pudding. You can find paw paw trees on campus behind Kahn Hall and near the Adam Joseph Lewis Center for Environmental Studies. Don't eat the skin or seeds, though — they're toxic!

Fall, Free & Fun

Azzie's Pumpkin Spice Syrup

Since the closest Starbucks to campus is more than a two-hour walk away (a short 20-minute drive for the lucky people with cars), you'll need to satisfy your pumpkin spice latte craving in town or on campus.

At Azariah's Café, you can add a pump of pumpkin spice syrup to your drink until mid-November. While it's not the Instagrammable Pumpkin Spice Venti Frappuccino, it only costs a meal swipe and tastes just as good.

If you loved getting lost in corn mazes as a child, now that you're an adult, you can try hiking instead! Though you usually know where you're going (boring), taking a walk in the Arboretum is a great way to enjoy the crisp fall weather. If you'd like a longer walk, the North Coast Inland Trail — a paved walking and biking path just south of the Arb — offers access to a number of parks in the area with longer trails, including Black River High Meadows and Cascade Park.

Outdoors & S'mores

Join the OC Program board Saturday, Oct. 1 at 7:30 p.m. for a bonfire and s'mores on the south end of Tappan Square. Graham crackers, chocolate and marshmallows will be provided for attendees.

